BASSANO LOWERS TAXES

A special meeting of the Council of the Town of Bassano was held in the Town Hall on Tuesday evening in order to consider the estimates of revenue and expenditure of the Town for the current year and to decide on a program of sewer and water line extensions.

The Budget of almost $60,000.00 was approved and the 1956 tax levy set at 55 mills on the $, a reduction of 5 mills from the 1955 levy.

The largest item of estimated expenditure for the current year is the sum of nearly $10,000.00 for capital expenditures out of current revenue.

It was decided to extend the water lines on the north side of Town for two blocks and the sewer lines for three blocks as well as install some modern water and sewer installations in the trailer camp. This will all be financed from current revenue.

Building permits totalling $32,000.00 have been issued so far this month.

TOWN TOPICS

Mrs. M. Knight, Bart and Heather motored to Hanna on Monday to visit relations.

Congratulations are extended to Rosalie Bell and Laurence Maurer on their recent engagement.

Mr. and Mrs. Nip Husband spent the week end visiting in Innisfail.

Mr. and Mrs. J.J. Rennie and family spent the holiday week end in Taber, guests of Mr. Rennie's sister and brother in law, Mr. and Mrs. William Broadfoot.

Mr. and Mrs. Ronnie MacLean and family were in town spending the holidays with Ronnie's parents, Mr. and Mrs. M. MacLean and renewing old acquaintances.

Mr. and Mrs. Ted Redmond and family of Calgary spent the holiday weekend visiting the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. Redmond.

J.W. Ratzlaff left on Tuesday for a business trip to points in Southern Alberta.

Mrs. I. McQuarrie and Bobby are visiting friends in Didsbury and Cremona for a few days.

Bassano looked deserted on Monday. It seemed that the majority of the citizens had taken in the sports day at either Brooks or Gleichen. It was such glorious weather it is unfortunate that someone hadn't organized some form of entertainment right here in Bassano.

Calgary has commenced water rationing again this year. While the local pumping station is still supplying the full demand for water, all Bassano citizens should be careful to avoid wasting it; otherwise it may be found necessary to institute some form of rationing here this year.

We hear that Miss Helen Dueck has sold her house and plans to move to B.C. shortly.

Gee, it's hot aint it?

WELL-BALANCED DIET MEANS GOOD HEALTH

Good health, to a large extent, depends upon the table. If meals are well-balanced and foods selected for their nutrient values, health will be improved. From infancy to old age, food has a great influence upon health. A daily menu based upon Canada's Food Rules will ensure the necessary supply of proteins, minerals and vitamins to keep the body in good shape.

Vikings among first settlers in Manitoba

Historians may debate whether the southern shore of Hudson's Bay was visited by the Norsemen and whether it was the mysterious "float coast with trees" called Vinland, but it is certain that descendants of the Vikings were among the first permanent settlers in Manitoba according to a British United Press report.

Records in Winnipeg show that Thomas Douglas, Earl of Selkirk, founded the first white settlement on the prairies in 1812. He brought hardy fellow Highlanders via the long northern route to establish his colony on a 10-million acre grant of land from the Hudson Bay Company.

Among these original colonists were at least 15 Norwegians. They probably were men interned in England during the Napoleonic wars and were only too glad to escape imprisonment by coming to the new world. They are mentioned as helping build a road along the Nelson River after the immigrants had spent a whole winter at sea locked in the ice.

Employed as boatmen

The group was led by Captain Even Holte. They were employed also as boatmen who transported colonists by water the 500 miles south to the junction of the Red and the Assiniboine rivers. It was a long journey up the Nelson River, across Lake Winnipeg and then on up the Red River to Fort Douglas, afterward to be called Fort Garry where Winnipeg city now is.

The Norwegian group apparently split. Some remained at the northern end of Lake Winnipeg and built a small settlement which still bears the name "Norway House". The others came on to the large settlement, where they obtained land and farmed like the rest of the newcomers.

Sweet Treat

And so easy with fast-rising Fleischmann's Active Dry Yeast... a treat that will bring demands for "more, please!"

Honey Bun Coffee Cake

1. In an 8-inch square cake pan, melt 3 tablespoons butter or margerine. Drizzle with 1/2 cup honey and sprinkle with 1/2 cup broken salted nutmeats.
2. Scald 1/2 cup milk. Remove from heat and stir in 1/4 cup honey, 3/4 teaspoon salt, 1/4 cup shortening. Cool to lukewarm.
3. In the meantime, measure into a large bowl 1/2 cup lukewarm water, 1 teaspoon granulated sugar

- and stir until sugar is dissolved. Sprinkle with contents of 1 envelope Fleischmann's Active Dry Yeast. Let stand 10 minutes, THEN stir well. Stir the lukewarm milk mixture and 1 well-beaten egg 1/2 teaspoon vanilla into the yeast mixture. Sift together once 2 cups once-sifted all-purpose flour, 3/4 teaspoon ground cinnamon.

- Sift dry ingredients into yeast mixture and stir until well blended—about 1 minute. 4. Spoon mixture into prepared cake pan. Cover. Military use

Capt. Joseph Garner found a military use for kitchen aluminum foil and recently won a commendation from authorities at the Air Force Special Weapons Centre at Kirtland Air Force base in New Mexico. At his suggestion, jet pilots there now carry sheets of the foil in their survival kits. Garner, an aeronautical engineer, suggested it makes good cooking utensils as well as emergency signalling reflectors for downed pilots.

Memory game

A memory game played by the three young daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Bowen of Cambria, Minnesota, led to the breakup of a juvenile crime ring. The girls read the number of a car parked at a filling station, memorized it and made it into a game. When Bowen learned the next day that the station had been robbed, the girls told him the license number and he gave it to authorities. The car was traced and its owner implicated other youths who later admitted a series of break-ins.

THE OBSERVER

BY HUGH PEARCE

Well, the usual bad news coming from the Town Hall about this time each year will lose a little of it's sting this year.

The Council has found it possible to reduce the mill rate from 60 mills to 55 mills, or nearly 10%, this year. The daily press has mentioned at least one town's budget plans in each issue for the past couple of weeks and you will note that only a few towns are even holding the line, much less reducing taxes. I am not complaining about the reduction; in fact, I would endeavor to bear up under the strain even if they reduced the taxes by another 10%.

Seriously, though, Bassano has made a wonderful come-back during the past 3 or 4 years. Four years ago the Town owed $20,000.00 in current debt (not including the old debentures), no property was being improved to add to the assessment and conditions looked very dark financially for the Town. Now a few short years later we find that $20,000.00 debt has been paid up, the new Bassano Hall built and fully paid for, a motor patrol grader purchased and paid for, hundreds of yards of gravel has been put on the streets and paid for and recently a new tractor and ditching machine has been purchased. All this has been done on a pay-as-you-go plan with no new debt created. Furthermore prospective home and business owners have been induced to build new buildings in Bassano with the result that assessment values are 50% over what they were in 1952. This condition tends to allow a reduction in taxes occasionally.

I feel that the Mayor and the Council have been largely responsible for this favorable financial condition and should be complimented for their administrative ability.

OUR COMPLETE SHORT STORY — a few minutes to go

—By LOUIS ARTHUR CUNNINGHAM

PAISLEY always permitted himself a quiet smile before he entered Mark Bethune's office — a smile quite different from the one he wore when the door closed behind him and he walked over to Bethune's desk. The inside smile was the open, cheery, comradely smile that one gives to a lifelong friend; the outside smile was for a man whose wife has lied to him and who doesn't know it.

Today, the outside smile faded as ever, but the inside smile died a-borning: Mark Bethune was sitting lazily in his chair, fondling a dark, evil-looking automatic. He looked up briefly from his contemplation of it, nodded to Paisley, resumed his idle toying with the gun.

Paisley was glad he had looked away so quickly. Paisley could feel that his cheeks had gone white: they must have — just as his mouth had become dry and caked, his palms wet, his insides sickish. Nonsense, to feel like that, Bethune couldn't know anything about — He looked at the clock; it was ten minutes to twelve.

Bethune also glanced over at the side wall and noted the time. He coming ugly, unendurable. He broke the silence that was besaid, "Hello, Paisley. Nice day for a murder."

Paisley, after a moment, heard a strange voice saying, "You planning to commit one, Mark?"

"I am. At twelve o'clock I'm going to shoot a man in gold blood."

"You're — why you're joking, Mark!" the strange voice said, and it came to Paisley that it was his own voice. It sounded like a disembodied thing. "Whom would you kill — and why?"

"The man who" — Bethune stared at the gun, rubbing its blue-black sheen with his thumb — "who took my wife."

Paisley felt the room whirl about him and the ceiling drop down to crush him. He had not moved from the door. He leaned against it now, his hand clamped on the knob, clamped hard so that it would not tremble like the other one.

"That — that's madness, Mark. You wouldn't make yourself a murderer just because —"

"Just because a man who professed to be my friend, who came to my house, ate my food, was a snake when it came to my wife! Oh, yes, Paisley, I decided on this course last night when I found some letters."

Paisley cursed Martha Bethune, damned her a thousand times for not destroying those notes; damned himself or ever writing them.

"But think, Mark" — The sweat was beading on his chalky forehead — "think what it means: it will be all over it a moment — for him; no pain, no anything much —"

"Only death and hell, I hope." Bethune's teeth were white and cruel.

Paisley swallowed. He wished he could stop staring at the gun in Bethune's twitching fingers; wished he could find courage to look at the clock, courage to fling the door open and run. He couldn't think, couldn't pray.

He licked his lips until he could make them move, make them shape words again. "But you — you're the one who will suffer hell, Mark! You'll go to jail! You'll go to the chair! You'll burn!"

"He will burn first, Paisley. Just a few minutes more."

Time, for Paisley, no longer existed. He was like an object fixed in space, a space that imminently would shatter and burst in one hideous blast of destruction. He could hear the monotonous, heartless ticking of the clock, a lot of wheels and springs measuring out the time a man should live.

The telephone at Bethune's elbow buzzed. He picked it up, cool, untroubled, his eyes on Paisley but not seeing Paisley at all. He said, "Hello? Yes. Is that so? Well, I'm very sorry — very sorry indeed to hear it." And he put down the telephone and smiled mirthlessly. "Just a minute to go and —"

Paisley broke then. His spirit, that had become a taut, tortured, twisted thing, that had frayed and frayed and all but given, snapped suddenly. "That gun!" he screamed. "Put it away. I won't be murdered! No matter what I did, you haven't the right to — What about her! Isn't she guilty too? For God's sake, Bethune — think of what you're doing! We tried to fight it, Martha and I! We — we couldn't! It was too much for us! I —"

Bethune stared at him. The city clocks were tolling twelve. Bethune began to laugh — grim, terrible, almost riotous laughter. "Only a few seconds to go now. You fool, Paisley. It wasn't you. I never dreamt you had guts enough to steal a man's wife. It was Gardner Phelan. He was to be here at twelve. That phone call said he had just been killed in a crossing smash." The blue-black circle stared implacably at Paisley as it rose slowly; stared him straight between the eyes. He saw Bethune's finger tighten. "Such a short time to go — and he got himself out of it, while you got yourself into it. Goodbye, Paisley. Good luck."

ESCAPES UNSCATHED — A triumphant bargain hunter wears a lampshade and carries suitcase and pillow as she escapes from frantic mob of 10,000 persons, mostly women, at the Toronto Symphony Orchestra's annual rummage sale. Another 5,000 persons were locked out.

Industrial safety

Familiarity with routine jobs often tends to make the worker careless. Safety devices, developed through long research and experience, are produced to prevent accidents and workers should avail themselves of this protection at all times on the job. Goggles are usually provided for those who work with strong glaring light or where particles which could cause blindness or other injury to the eyes, are thrown off by machines; special goggles designed to protect the eyes should be worn at all times where shop regulations require this.

GARDEN NOTES

Try something new to add color, interest to borders

Usually on a special page of the seed catalogue will be listed brand new varieties and novelties. Among these will be the All-America winners for this year. These are new flowers and vegetables that in Canadian and American field trials last year were awarded the most points. A few of these will certainly add color and interest to any border.

In the vegetable lines there are a whole lot of improved productions. New, faster growing and crisper radish, more tender carrots, new beans, beets and corn. Over the years plant breeders have given us tremendous improvement in all vegetables. Not only are varieties grown today far more tender than those of a generation ago, but they are also much earlier and more disease resistant. With these it is possible to have a good garden with much variety in areas where it was hardly safe to risk anything but the toughest things before. This progress has meant more to Canada than most countries because our growing season is so short.

Fertilizer

Commercial fertilizers contain three main elements; nitrogen, phosphoric acid and potash. These are usually indicated in a formula on the bag or box, thus 2-4-6 or 6-4-2 or some similar combination. The first figure indicates the amount of nitrogen, the second phosphoric acid and the last the proportion of potash. If, for example, we want to encourage green growth as in grass, lettuce, cabbage and such, we choose a fertilizer high in the first mentioned element. If it is root growth we are interested in, such as beets and potatoes, we use more potash. Sometimes certain soils are very deficient in one of these elements and we naturally select a fertilizer to remedy that deficiency.

Chemical fertilizer is potent stuff and it should be handled carefully and according to directions. Results are literally amazing. It will start flowers and vegetables growing quickly, will make grass green almost overnight. The safest way to apply to lawns and flower beds is to dissolve in water and sprinkle during or just after a rain. This prevents any burning injury to the grass or flowers. With vegetables, we usually sprinkle along the rows close to the plants but not actually touching them and then cultivate in. A big show

It is not too late to have a big show of annual flowers from a few cents worth of seed. Zinnias, marigolds, nasturtiums, asters, cosmos, and many others will still produce plenty of bloom before frost in most parts of Canada. The easiest way to handle is simply to plant in little well raked plots here and there throughout the flower beds. A few weeks later when the plants have come up and developed their second set of leaves, we leave a few where they have grown, pick out the rest and transplant throughout the rest of the bed.

ALL RECOVERED

Six youngsters were wheeled in to St. Francis Hospital in Peoria, Illinois, with stomach complaints. A 2½-year-old boy ate eight aspirin tablets and washed them down with a half bottle of liquid laxative. A nine-year-old boy swallowed a small rock. Four girls from one to 2½ years old ate several boxes of aspirin and heads from a book of safety matches. All recovered.

A common tennis fault

A mistake many players make when waiting for the service in tennis is standing neither close enough to the service court nor far enough away. Thus, they often have to play the ball on the peak of its bounce—always a difficult shot.

We suggest that you stand close enough so that the service can be taken stomach high while it is still on the way up. However, if you can't get the knack of this, move back and play the ball as it drops to waist height after reaching its peak.

Though it is not always possible to make these adjustments because the ball often lands in different parts of the service court, the receiver can, by a little aggressive footwork, adjust his position. By studying his opponents' service habits carefully he should be able to establish a definite pattern and position himself accordingly.

Flexibility for better fielding

The action of fielding a ground ball, particularly when running, demands great flexibility, especially in the hip and lower back regions. A player lacking this quality will make many errors because he cannot get down to the ball easily without losing his balance.

It has been noted that fielders who are flexible in these key areas can also move faster and with more freedom than those who lack it.

If you are an infielder, we suggest that you work on an exercise called the "spread leg head touch" to improve your back and hip flexibility. Briefly, here's how it is done.

Stand with your legs spread as wide apart as you can get them—really stretch. Reach down and grasp the ankles. Be sure to keep your knees stiff. Now, pull your head down toward the floor. Your objective is to touch the floor with your forehead. Then, relax, stand up, and repeat. Do this exercise 10-12 times as often as you have time every day.

Next, sit on the floor, spread your legs wide and grasp the ankles. Pull your head down as far as you can, trying to touch the floor, relax and repeat. Do this section of the exercises 10-12 times as often as you have the chance during the day.

Remember, a little thing like added flexibility can make a big difference to your fielding, so get to work on these exercises now.

London lawyer has sure winner

Harold Cassel, a London, England, lawyer who can see both sides of a question, had a sure winner.

Cassel went to court as prosecutor, found the defendant had no lawyer, then volunteered to act for the defence as well.

Cassel, the prosecutor, accused Thomas Elliot of driving a motorcycle without a licence.

Cassel, the defence counsel, said Elliott merely was pushing the motorcycle and declared the prosecution argument calling it driving "is absurd."

The judge ruled that Cassel, the defence counsel, was the more convincing. The case was dismissed.

Intruder

The chill realization that the intruder was still in the house crept over Mrs. Elsie Herzog of Bird Island, Minn.

She had just returned from a shopping trip. Floor lamps lay overturned, curtains were torn, table tops scratched and flower pots were dumped.

At first she thought it was the work of young vandals. Then she remembered having locked the doors and closed the windows.

Mrs. Herzog summoned the police. They found nothing in the main part of the house.

In the basement they found the invader—a squirrel who had entered through the fireplace chimney and was unable to find an escape route.
